FAQ

Processing I'd be more suspicious that there's a graphics-context leak somewhere which is causing something to look flipped which otherwise isn't flipped.. Processing Knowing that it happens only with focus is valuable I don't know how, but it narrows things down.

Does a newly-opened tab have the same problem?Yes and it persists in the original tabs as well.. I seem to recall unholy things done to make the baseline and selection height match the UI requirements, but I can't offhand think of how that would lead to this result.

I notice that things aren't centered quite right, which probably implies that it's flipped within a larger context (like the entire cell, or the interior of the cell).. - Does the find bar have the same problem? - Does a newly-opened tab have the same problem? - If not, what about when you go back to the original tab? - Does a new window have the same problem? Processing Hi Google guys, I posted that Reddit thread, thanks for taking this seriously.. Answers to question posted by Shess in #10: Does it fix itself if I remove focus form the omnibox (click in content)? If I click on the web page (e. افضل برنامج تسجيل الصوت الكمبيوتر جهاز

Yes, as do incognito windows, even after restarting Chrome and the MacBook.. g Search bar on) omnibox text is normal, only inverted while trying to type or copy/ paste.. Does the find bar have the same problem? I think the find bar was normal, I use it often and I don't remember it being flipped but as I've 'fixed' it I can't confirm this.. So far it has not occurred I will leave HW acceleration on and update if/ when it does with a screen recording. 34bbb28f04 Usb To Hdmi Adapter For Mac
